HCA Announces Internal Reorganization to Position Company for Future
Milton Johnson becomes President, retains role as Chief Financial Officer

Nashville, Tenn., February 11, 2011 – HCA today announced an internal reorganization, effective immediately, designed to better align the company’s structure with the future dynamics of the healthcare industry. The changes include: the creation of a new subsidiary that will provide business services to other healthcare companies; a new structuring of provider operations; and a further integration of clinical quality performance with physician practice services.

“Emerging changes in healthcare require us to take a new approach to many aspects of how we deliver care. Our refined structure is intended to better position HCA to take advantage of this evolution,” said Richard M. Bracken, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of HCA. “In addition, we are excited about our plan to offer certain of HCA’s industry-leading practices to other healthcare concerns.”

Today’s announcement includes the promotion of R. Milton Johnson to President of HCA; he retains his title and responsibilities as Chief Financial Officer. Johnson, a nearly 30-year veteran of HCA, has held numerous leadership positions within the company and was elected to HCA’s board of directors in 2009.

“Milton has long been an integral member of HCA’s management team,” noted Bracken. “His appointment as President is a reflection of the leadership role he plays in our organization.”

Beverly B. Wallace, who reports to Johnson and most recently was President of HCA’s Shared Services Group, becomes President of a new wholly-owned subsidiary, which is anticipated to provide revenue cycle, staffing services and supply chain management to other healthcare providers.

Also as part of the reorganization, the company’s Chief Medical Officer, Dr. Jonathan B. Perlin, expands his role to include responsibility for HCA affiliated physician practices. This new alignment better integrates physician practices with the organization’s overall clinical and quality operations. Perlin’s new title is President of HCA’s Clinical and Physician Services Group.
The reorganization includes the promotion of Sam Hazen to President of Operations, a new position, which reports to Bracken. In this role, he oversees the operations of the company’s 164 hospitals and 106 freestanding surgery centers, domestically and in the U.K. Hazen’s previous position, which he held since 2001, was President of HCA’s Western Group, where he had responsibility for 63 hospitals in nine states.

HCA’s four operational group presidents now report to Hazen. Jon M. Foster, who had been President of HCA’s Central and West Texas Division in Austin, Texas, is now responsible for the company’s operations throughout Texas as well as Colorado, Oklahoma and Wichita, Kansas. Chuck Hall, who has been President of HCA’s Eastern Group covering Florida, South Carolina and southern Georgia, now adds responsibility for HCA’s operations in Alaska, California, Nevada, Utah and Idaho. Bruce Moore, who had been President of HCA’s Outpatient Services Group, becomes President, Operations and Service Lines Integration and is responsible for the company’s Ambulatory Surgery Division, and service line integration, including behavioral health sciences and oncology. Paul Rutledge retains responsibility for HCA’s operations in Louisiana, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, New Hampshire, northern Georgia, the Kansas City market and London, England.
